INTRODUCTION

It was about the year 1871 that the writer first became greatly interested in the history of the Kirkpatrick family. The conversations with Martha Kirkpatrick-Williams, who at this time was eighty years old, but whose memory was exceedingly keen, were always full of deep interest. Her experience was extremely varied and yet, no doubt, frequently duplicated by the experience of many others. Her life had been rather lonely since the death of her husband in 1855. The home was near the middle of a hundred acre farm. The elevation of the house, however, gave a fairly good view of one of the chief highways of the county which became a hard-surfaced road in 1872, but this highway was sixty rods or more to the south of the house. The nearest neighbor was nearly a half mile away. Thus, it was rather a lonesome place to live with a widowed daughter, for thirty years.

But her early life was quite different. Born in New Jersey in 1791, she was the oldest child of Andrew Kirkpatrick and Phoebe Read. Her father had known something of the stirring times of the American Revolution. Her grandfather, Captain John Kirkpatrick, had enlisted in the army at the very beginning of the Revolution. He was present at the surrender at Yorktown. This granddaughter thus listened to the experiences of a veteran in service. The impressions on her mind were firmly established. She could relate them in vivid detail, while her knitting needles flew in and out of the stockings she always had near at hand, even in her sleep, and in her hands in all wakeful hours.

Later in life the writer began to search for the history of this family in books. He soon learned that there was a dearth of printed matter, tho this was one of the old families. This was partly due to the fact that when the old manor house burned down, in the absence of the family, August 29th, 1748, practically all the family papers and records, as well as the silver and portraits were destroyed. But here and there fragments were discovered. These have been carefully copied when they could not be purchased. In some instances trace of information was followed for years before the information was actually found and possession obtained. It has required thousands of letters and many hours, days, weeks, months and years of time. I do not regret the cost in either time or money. But I do sometimes regret the lack of interest manifested by those who bear the name of such a worthy family. Those who bear other surnames can scarcely be expected to manifest so great an interest. But it is nevertheless true that those who have manifested the greatest enthusiasm in the work have born other names. So while I must give great credit to the late General Elbert W. Kirkpatrick for his aid, and to Judge Thomas Kerr Kirkpatrick, I must also give credit for encouragement to Prof. William C. Armstrong, Marcella O'Neal, Maydee Barron, Zara Marie Brown and numerous others who have either contributed information or manifested great zeal in searching for it.—The author.

CLOSEBURN CASTLE

THE STRONGHOLD OF THE KIRKPATRICKS

Closeburn Castle, the Stronghold of the Kirkpatricks, located in Nitherdale, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, was constructed about the year 1300. The location of the estate so near the English border made it necessary to construct a fortress that could be depended upon. Stone mortars capable of throwing twelve-pound rocks a distance of one thousand feet were in use as early as the year 757 A. D., and the builder of this structure was not going to take any unnecessary risks.

When we look back and remember that bows and arrows, spears and battle axes were the weapons in use in warfare at that time we are at some loss to understand any necessity for such heavy walls. Gun powder had been in use in China for two thousand years, but it was not until Schwartz discovered a method of granulating the powder in 1320 that it became an effective agency in warfare.

History informs us that a cannon was used as early as 618 B. C. But firearms did not come into use until about the year 1500 A. D.

The Kirkpatrick Coat of Arms was authorized by Alexander II in 1232 and the family became one of considerable influence by the year 1300, and could place in the field a troop of four hundred mounted men.

The location was selected on an elevated mound near the middle of a drained lake. This mound contains about four acres. The structure is forty feet wide and sixty feet long and fifty-six feet in height. The lower story was nine feet in height and enclosed by a stone wall twelve feet in thickness. No door, window or any kind of opening to the outside. It was provided with a well to supply water in case of a siege. The main hall was on the second floor and surrounded by a wall nine feet thick. A door four feet wide could be reached by a draw bridge which could be raised or lowered as desired. A heavy iron door or gate was made of pieces one and one-eighth inches square. This gate is still in existence and in good condition. The original windows were mere narrow slits on the outside, but widening inward at a sharp angle to permit of the use of bows and arrows. Some of these window slits were cut out to wider dimensions for regular windows later, as shown in the engraving.

The third story was provided with walls six feet thick and the same kind of windows. The ceilings were arched and supported by very heavy timbers. The roof was surrounded by battlements which protected the arches. On the top of the roof was a watch tower. There was a beacon on Watchman Hill, two miles distant, and the light could be distinctly seen from the castle. A code of signals could thus announce the coming of a friend or foe at any hour of the day or night.

The castle was surrounded by a moat which could be flooded with water at any time.

There is no record to show that there was any attack ever made upon this castle. Whether it was considered useless to make an effort to capture it, or whether the owner kept his men so continuously in the field his enemies never had time to attack the castle, is an unknown factor. But the real facts appear to be that a very small force could defend the castle and thus permit the owner with his main force always to be ready to defend his country.

Near the beginning of the 17th century a large manor house was constructed to afford more healthful and convenient quarters. This fine old manor was destroyed by fire in 1748 and for a time the family again took up their abode in the tower and adjoining buildings. Here they remained until 1783, when the estate passed into the ownership of the Bairds.

Some years ago a movement was set on foot to collect money to purchase the estate and Dr. John E. Kirkpatrick went to Scotland to see what the conditions might be. He found the place, took some pictures, and gathered some historical facts.

ALEXANDER KIRKPATRICK OF SCOTLAND

115-Generation. (I) Alexander, Andrew, James, Jacob, Sarah, Hugh, Isabelle, John, Thomas.

It is not known if these names are in the order of their birth or not. Neither is it known if these were all the children of the family. Families were large in that day, as a rule. Many children died young, for want of proper care and suitable nourishment. The year of birth is not known. But Alexander must have been born about the year 1700 for at the time of his removal to Belfast in 1725 from Watties Neach, he was married and had two children, Andrew and David. Before leaving Belfast for New Castle, Delaware in 1736, three more children, Jannet, Mary and Alexander, were born.

116-G. (x2) I. Andrew Kirkpatrick was born at Watties Neach, Scotland, about 1722, married Margaret Gaston.

116-G. (x3) II. David Kirkpatrick, born Feb. 17, 1724, died March 19, 1814; married Mary McEowen.

116-G. (4) III. Jannet Kirkpatrick, born in Belfast, married Duncan McEowen, a brother of Mary.

116-G. (5) IV. Mary Kirkpatrick married John Bigger and had John, David, Elizabeth, Ann, Ruth, Mary.

116-G. (6) V. Alexander Kirkpatrick became a merchant at Peapack, N. J., married Margaret Anderson, and had two or more children. Alexander, who removed to New York and there married. Martha, who married John Stevenson of Morristown, N. J.

ANDREW KIRKPATRICK (116-G)

116-Generation. (501) Andrew Kirkpatrick was born at Watties Neach, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, about the year 1710 and removed with an older brother, Alexander, to Belfast, Ireland, in 1725. His brother was married and had two children. They remained in Belfast until 1736 when they took ship for New Castle, Delaware. They settled in Somerset County, New Jersey, near Mine Brook. In 1750 Andrew and his family removed to Sussex County and settled near Johnsonburg. We have no information as to the name of his wife but we are informed that at this time he had four grown children: (502) John, (503) Martha, (504) David, (505) Elizabeth.

117-G. (502) John Kirkpatrick was born in Somerset County about 1738 or 1739, and died in that part of Sussex County, which was afterwards cut off into Warren County, April 17, 1822. He married Lydia Lewis. He was Lieutenant in Capt. Henry Johnson's Company, Second Regiment of Sussex County, and later was made Captain of the same company and served to the close of the Revolution. They had ten children: (506) Andrew, (507) David, (508) Mary, (509) Elizabeth, (510) Thomas, (511) Alexander, (512) John, (513) William, (514) Ann, (515) Lydia.

ANDREW KIRKPATRICK (118-G)

118-G. (506) Andrew Kirkpatrick was born about 1761. He was about fifteen years old when his father went to help Washington drive the British out of Boston, and with his brother, David, two years younger, aided his mother to conduct the farm during the trying days of the Revolution. He married Phoebe Read, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Read. They had eight children.

119-G. (x523) Joseph Kirkpatrick, born 1809, died 1882. Age 73 years.

Andrew and his family removed to Guernsey County, Ohio, by wagons in 1806. Thus all the children were born in New Jersey, except Joseph, the youngest child.

This concludes the family of Andrew Kirkpatrick, the eldest son of Captain John Kirkpatrick. There are many names in this branch that we have been unable to obtain. It may be possible that some one who reads these lists will be able to send in missing names to be placed upon our permanent records. But even though we have to admit our failure to list all the names that should be in this branch of the family the reader will find eleven hundred names in the lists given and for one couple to have even eleven hundred descendants in one hundred and fifty years is not a poor record. We estimate seven hundred are missing, chiefly in the branches of John and David. The fact that David left no sons and that none of his descendants bear the "Kirkpatrick" name makes it all the more difficult to find them.

DAVID KIRKPATRICK (118-G)

118-G. (507) David Kirkpatrick, born about 1763. It has been claimed that David settled near Lexington, Kentucky, about 1806, but that later he removed to Adams County, Ohio. Thus far we have been unable to verify this.

MARY KIRKPATRICK (118-G)

118-G. (508) Mary Kirkpatrick married (1) Joseph Read, (2) James G. Newman. It is not known if any children were born to the first marriage. Four children are given for the second marriage.

119-G. (2001) Lydia Newman, born Oct. 14, 1811.

119-G. (2002) Samuel G. Newman, born Aug. 24, 1813.

119-G. (2003) William Kirkpatrick Newman, born Dec. 14, 1816.

119-G. (2004) Catharine Mary Newman, born June 19, 1818.

These removed from New Jersey to western Ohio, with others in 1834. The writer has searched for their descendants, but has been unable to locate them. We found one old resident who remembers to have met and conversed with Samuel G. Newman and the writer recalls some memories of the family, but very few by the name are to be found in Logan County.

ELIZABETH KIRKPATRICK (118-G)

118-G. (509) Elizabeth Kirkpatrick married (1) ——— Predmore, (2) after the death of her sister Mary and Mr. Predmore, Elizabeth married her brother-in-law, James G. Newman. Three children were born to Elizabeth.

119-G. (2101) Daniel Predmore.

119-G. (2102) Ann Predmore.

119-G. (2103) Elizabeth Newman.

These removed with their mother to Bellefontaine, Ohio, in 1834. W. C. Armstrong, in his excellent book on Captain John Kirkpatrick, tells us that James G. Newman died near Dublin, Ohio, some ten miles northwest of Columbus, January 23, 1834, while on the way from Guernsey County, Ohio, to Logan County, with his wife Elizabeth and seven children. He adds that James was married three times. His first wife was Hannah Moore, by whom he had three daughters who remained in New Jersey and grew up among their Newman kindred. The writer believes that Elizabeth Newman, the only child of James G. Newman and Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, married a Mr. Edwards, but no descendants have been located.

118-G. (510) Thomas Kirkpatrick, who came to Ohio in 1834, is thought to have reared his family in the north central part of the state. Further search is under way.

7. William J. Kirkpatrick, born 1838, at Duncannon, Pa. Developed musical ability quite young and was encouraged by his father. He early began conducting classes in music and in 1855 was appointed by the church to revise and publish with words and music all the hymns used in church service. This was a stupendous task to assign to a seventeen-year-old member of the church. But he entered upon the task with earnest enthusiasm. Going from church to church he selected the most appropriate hymns and adapted to notes that, in his opinion, brought out the meaning of the words, with greatest force and inspiration. His collection was published in 1859, under the title of "Devotional Melodies." It was the first book of Gospel Songs ever published in any land, containing both words and music. The book had a remarkable sale. Choir leaders all over America welcomed publication which was destined to revolutionize church music and make it possible for every church to have the very best hymns sung by trained voices. It was a marvelous reformation for this twenty-one-year old choir master to set before the world. Wm. B. Bradbury could not remain silent and permit this youth to reap all the harvest so he came out a year later with a collection of fine songs, entitled, "Golden Chain," and followed this in 1862 with another collection called "Golden Shower."

Then followed C. C. Converse, Robert Lowry, S. J. Vail, Philip Phillips, P. P. Bliss, T. E. Perkins, H. P. Main, George F. Root, H. R. Palmer, W. H. Doane, E. A. Hoffman, E. S. Lorenze, our own beloved Wm. A. Ogden, T. C. O'Kane, and others, each producing from one to five collections before 1875. This period was not only rich in its production of Gospel Songs, but the same period developed some remarkable performers. Philip Phillips possessed a wonderful voice, a charming personality and captivated every audience before which he appeared. Oratory in the pulpit which had long swayed the multitude now found a rival in the singing evangelist and the organ. Then the partnership of Moody and Sankey carried the movement to all the world. But the originator of the movement did not sit down in silence. For seventy years he continued to compose, to publish, and to sing. 121 different collections of "Devotional Melodies" but under different titles, came from the publishers to attest to the industry and enthusiasm of Wm. J. Kirkpatrick, between 1855 and 1925. For twenty-seven years he conducted the singing at Winter Park, Florida, each winter. His last public appearance was in a National Conference of Gospel Song leaders in 1923 at Atlantic. The writer had several letters from him at that period and received a copy of a picture taken at that Conference. Wm. J. Kirkpatrick is seated behind a small table on the platform. At his right, T. S. Morgan. At his left, Charles H. Gabriel. Standing behind these are Clarence Reynolds, Charles H. Gabriel, Jr., and Homer Rodehaver. Where in all the wide, wide world would you find another such powerful musical combination?

ROBERT KIRKPATRICK OF PENNSYLVANIA

The data here given has come from several sources. The groups appear to dovetail into a common branch. We have been unable to verify this fact but give them separately. If they are not of the same branch no harm is done. We are told that there were eight children born to Robert Kirkpatrick in Lancaster County, Pa., and that all of these were pioneer settlers in Utica, Ohio, except one who settled in Illinois. Nathaniel, the oldest, settled here in 1810. His first child, Flora, was the first white child born in Utica. Jane or Jennie, another daughter, married Dr. Robert Wallace, and lived most of her life in Mansfield. Nathaniel had a brother, Theopholis, and a sister Hannah, who married David Moore. There were two half-brothers, Peter and David, whose descendants may yet be found in or near the village of Utica.
